- From this programme we came to know there are so many schemes by DST (stuti) try to provide information to the students by taking one session.
- whole day students can't stand continuously so try to adjust session like one session for Theory and one is for handling. if possible.

I would like to appreciate for all the efforts in organizing the sessions and managing everything very well. As I observed few things in this week, I would like to suggest that, it would be more even better that if we had got chance on hands on practical session for much time and directly discussing about the handling of instrument, techniques, and not going for theory into depths as we are aware of all concepts. And please check for timings should not be for complet 7-8 hrs of standing or hrs of listening one person's lecture. Glad to be a part of this training programme.

The Training program was indeed very much useful; only thing is theory and hands on could have been in a single day. Since, hands on session went on for one whole day, we felt very much exhausted standing the whole day. Other than that it was golden opportunity to get to know about the analytical techniques. Thank you.

Any other suggestions/ observations, if any- The training session was highly informative and useful for research career. If the hands-on session and theory classes of the instruments organized simultaneously, it would have been better. Since, it was difficult to adopt to this hectic schedule. However, on a whole the program was organized very well.

- # It would be more effective if the number of members in a batch is reduced to 20, more people in a batch practical sessions will be difficult to observe & understand.
- # Please try to keep theory & practicals in blended mode per day. (half day theory half day lab)

For the theory classes on the instrumentations, the given two hrs is not sufficient to explain it from the basics. so, therefore the theory classes are rushed away. The time has to be extended for the theory classes.

Overall the workshop was very informative and highly useful. One suggestion that I would like to pen down is to have hands-on session and theory to be adjusted for a single day. Having only Hands-on session for the entire day is physically taxing. Only that could be avoided.
